Urbana, Ill .-- Unless chinch-bugs are checked, their infestation threatens to spread again over the entire Mississippi Valley and cause a recurrence of the losses of 1887, which would amount to nearly $100,000,000, W. P. Flint, state entomologist at the University of Hinois, has warned. Over 65 counties in Illinois are now infested with the chinch-bugs, according to Mr. Fitnt. We must burn them out, he says. Unless weather conditions next spring are specially unfavorable for the growth and development of these bugs, or unless steps are taken to destroy them in their winter quarters, serious crop losses are sure to follow.

Chinch-bugs destroy or greatly re-duce the yield of corn, barley, spring wheat, oats, millet, winter wheat, rye broom corn, sorghum, and other grass crops. They will not feed on legumes soybeans, sweet and red clover, cowpeas and the like-or, in fact, on any crop that is not a grass.
